PACIFIC STRAIN OF POLYANTHEUS PRIMROSES

As the Polyantheus group is the most hardy and easiest to grow of all the primrose family, succeeding in practically every climate, I have concentrated my work on improving this particular type. My aim is to develop a wider and clearer color range, taller stems, and larger size of individual flowers and flower heads.

Strong Plants Grown One Season from Divisions. You will find these more satisfactory than freshly divided plants. Colors: white, yellow, new blends, pink, bronze blends, scarlet-flame, blue, reds in different shades. Price, 25c ea., doz. $2.05.

HARDY ENGLISH CHRYSANTHEMUMS

Perhaps by this time most of you have tried these hardy English mums and know how good they are. I start shipping around the first of April. Strong husky plants. Prices, 25c each. Doz. $2.04.

STORAGE OF DAHLIA ROOTS

Dahlia roots in winter storage will not tolerate damp free open air. On the other hand, warm, dry free open air may dry them out to the extent of killing them, especially if they are not fully matured. They should be stored in a frost proof place as cool as possible. They can be stored in barrels, boxes or any thing but they must be imbedded preferable, vermiculite, an insulation material, or sand, dirt if dry or peet. Sawdust sometimes draws moisture and fosters mildew. An old fashioned vegetable or apple pit is ideal. Standing water in a pit will rot the roots. It is wise to line the pit with wire cloth, boards or concrete to keep the mice from eating them. A cover over the top to keep out excess moisture is necessary. The stalks are cut close as possible and clumps pilled one on top the other upside down as high as you like.

A good way to distinguish your dahlias by name is to write on them with an indelible lead pencil, medium or soft lead. The root must be wet or the pencil won't write on it. I use a small brush and water to clean a spot big enough to write a number on the root. The numbers corresponding to the names are recorded in a book for reference.

THE CARE OF CHRYSANTHE-MUMS: On receiving them from the mail, they should be submerged in rather cool water for a few minutes. Keep the sun from shining hot on them by shading. No matter how wet the soil is, use plenty of water to soak them in good, but should the sun shine hot on the soil immediately afterwards or sometime afterwards, they would most likely get scalded and die. Mulch around them with cloth or lawn clippings or something.

SUMMER CARE: The two main things to keep in mind is, to build a strong root system and at the same time to keep them from getting too tall and slim. To do this pinch the very top out when they are about 10 inches tall. Top all stems any time after this if they commence to grow weak and spindly. Don't let too many laterals grow. Stop disbudding in plenty of time for them to form buds say the first of July or the first of August according to the variety grown. Allow a month, any way for buds to form. When color shows in the bud or when as big as peas, cut close all laterals except 3 to 5 or even one if you want real large flowers. Leave as many on each branch. Summer drouth is very destructive to their blooming. A roof of cello-glass to keep them dry in the blooming period will have to fight both fungus and insects.

I ship my plants in round open end cartons to insure them getting plenty of air so they won't rot. I pack in spaghnum moss with perhaps a small amount of peet to insure the packing retaining enough moisture.

I have had wonderful success in landing stuff in good shape any where in the United States.

TESTIMONIALS: Unless I have the permission, I do not publish the names of satisfied customers that have written me. I could mention a lot of them if I had room in the catalog.

(Post card). 5/14/'51. I just received the mums I ordered and I want to congratulate you on the condition of the plants. They had been 5 days on the road and they looked as though they had just been dug. I got some in the same mail from the East coast and there was no comparison. Yours were 1000 times better.

Yours truly, Dr. Dwight E. Ward, 521 New York Bldg., St. Paul, Minn.
